Lance Howell has always been interested in shifters, especially the most beautiful of their men. But he's always been nervous about werebears -- in fact he's never interviewed a single bear. And that's saying something for an anthropologist whose sole study shifter culture.

When the head of the anthropology department sends him on a quest to find information about bear shifters and fated mates, Lance gets more than he bargained for. He meets the man of his dreams -- the reclusive, mysterious Raleigh Woods.

When Raleigh wants to teach Lance a thing or two about shifter mating habits, will Lance be able to handle the hands-on lesson? Or will he be scared away by a man too tall, dark, and grizzly to be true?
