A Joint Strategic Vision for The Future - Part 1: Moving Past the Cold War and The Start of The Peace Divident Decade 1992-1998 (The Peace Dividend) Diana Kanecki

The “Peace Divident Decade” existed from 1992-1999. The beginnings and foundations of The Decade started with along with support later, based upon the discussions presented here. At the time, I was Associate Vice President at the Society for Computer Simulation, SCS.org, in La Jolla, California. The activity I was charged with was Emergency Management and Planning Technical Engineering Activity. In helping to improve emergency management and planning, we were able to establish the “Peace Divident” decade that say great growth in quality of life as we had really move past the Cold War and its' obligations and implications of working on a world-wide basis.

During this time, one protocol that had to be followed precisely is that we all are scientist. As scientist, we are able to share observations, discoveries, and have discussions. However, as scientist, we are not allowed to talk about politics or religion. My mother attended the 3rd leading women's college at the time in the early 1950's, it was a Southern University, and my reminded me in polite conversation not to talk about religion or politics as well achieving more with honey than with vinegar. I mention this because my mother's philosophy along with my father's executive management teachings allowed for a breakthrough that helped all.

We can achieve it again, and I hope these reading will show a framework of how to do it again,.
