Tasha Daniels was twenty-four years old when her life was turned upside down. Her baby's father, Devon Hunter was sent to federal prison for drug distribution, and she was forced to become a single parent to six-year-old Devon Jr. and four-year-old De'sha. Unable to afford the condo her and Devon lived in, she moved into the Columbus Circle housing project with her cousin Michelle until she got on her feet. She was only supposed to be there for a few months, but it turned into five long years. Life was no picnic, and she found herself contemplating a life without Devon when she reconnected with someone from her past. Ten years later, with Devon released and up to his old tricks, Tasha struggles to maintain the new life she's built, all while trying to control the urges of two sexually charged teenagers. Sandy Davis was Tasha's best friend. They had known each other since they were twelve years old. When you saw Sandy, you knew Tasha wasn't far behind. Tasha was responsible for setting her up with the love of her life, Quaron Hicks. He was new to Hartford, and he and Sandy hit it off right away. They had a daughter named Quincy. Sandy and Q were just as in love as Tasha and Devon, but over the last ten years, cracks had begun forming in their relationship; after Sandy aborted the baby that Q so desperately wanted. Reeling from her deception, Q does the unthinkable. Can the two best friends remain in control of the lives they've come to expect or will they crumble under the weight of the world as a new power couple emerges?
